A Friendly Brunch

After finishing their mains and their sides at the cafe near the Gate of Dawn, the friends went about the most important part of brunch, arguing over the bill.

"Well, I remember we all ordered a different main and side."

"That's right Charlotte, and each main cost between $1 and $5. Same for the sides."

"Interestingly the main dish of corn cakes didn't end up with a person or another dish that started with 'C'. They were also the only main that cost $1 more than the side they were paired with."

"Dennis, were you just flaunting your wealth by getting a more expensive side than Charlotte?"

"Why didn't any of us get a main and a side with the same price? That would have had a nice symmetry."

"Neat! I just noticed that all of the mains with an even number of words paired with odd-priced sides, and odd word count mains paired with even priced sides."

"Quiet. I can't believe any of you would pay $2 for french toast as a main dish. Those couldn't be very tasty."

"Bruce, how many times do I have to tell you I'm carboloading! That's why I got the waffles on the side as well."

"How did someone managed to get a meal for only $3?! That's ridiculous! I had to pay $7 for mine!"

"Yeah, cause you got the side of poached eggs. If you didn't want to spend so much you should have gotten something cheap like the $1 milk toast as a main."

"The eggs were worth every penny I paid! Evelyn was also a big spender, she got the most expensive main"

"Hey, did you notice that Dennis' main dish cost twice as much as the side of crumpets, but was still cheaper than my side of bacon?"

"Nobody likes it when you talk like a logician Annette! Maybe if you and Bruce hadn't spent more on your sides than your mains you wouldn't be so cranky."

"Random question, was that side of congee really worth $4?"

"Oh it totally was. Definitely better money than the $5 muffin you got as a main."

"Hey Bruce, did you enjoy that scone you got?"

"It was delicious. Here's my $7. Can the rest of you just pay now so we can get out of here?"
